APOLOGIA

For good reasons and sundry, which need not be inflicted upon the readers of Trowel and Typewriter (Readers, are you still there?), there was no issue of T. & T. in spring or summer. Also there were no field trips, and consequently no wild flower seed list for this season. . . . But bulbs, bless their hearts, go right on growing, so here they are, compressed into a mere check list. As always, their number is limited, for this is only a little garden, so order soon.

THAT DOUBLE TRILLIUM

Double trilliums seem to be very desirable, judging from the many inquiries and orders received. If you wish to try this lovely and rare flower, which has about thirty petals instead of three, order now for October delivery. Growth is starting, but they can be successfully sent, packed in moss. Plant in your woodland garden, in good leafmold. $5 each.

RE CONSERVATION

If you wish, I will enclose with your bulb order, one of the little native Oregon tree seedlings that appear in the garden, self sown. Mostly vine maple, Oregon maple, Garry oak, Oregon ash, madrona.

CHRISTMAS THOUGHT

Holly is beginning to turn color now, from yellow to red. The berries will be ripe and hard, ready for your Christmas wreath, when December comes. Do you want my autumn list of Christmas holly and Oregon evergreens sent to a friend? Drop me a postcard.

* * *

There will be no descriptive list of daffodils and other bulbs this fall. I have some old lists with descriptions, and will send one to any one who asks for it. Order from the list on opposite page.

I have some small daffodils, unregistered seedlings, which are the result of accidental crossing. They are nine to twelve inches high and not very large flowers; nice for table use. In mixture, $1.00 a dozen bulbs. They increase well.

RE-ENTER THE SCILLAS

We dug up all the scillas, or thought we did, under the oak tree, among the iris innominata, but they came last spring thick as ever. They are white, there are still too many, so once more I offer you 100 small-sized bulbs for $1.25. Small offsets of grape hyacinth, to plant in drifts, 100 for $1.25.
